

With four Grammy nominations under his belt and a Latin Grammy win for his 2004 album Coral, David Sánchez debuts his 8th album, Cultural Survival. The album features his mammoth Chamber Music America commission “La Leyenda del Cañaveral,” which is based on a poem by his sister Margarita, and refers to the travels of African people who worked on the sugar cane plantations throughout America and the Caribbean. Sánchez describes the song as ‘a journey’ set to the rich history and anecdotes of these people.

Unquestionably among the finest saxophonists of his generation, David Sánchez continues to fuse his fierce, straight ahead sound with African, Afro-Cuba and Caribbean influence, but his instantly recognizable sound transcends any such categorization.

“Sánchez makes solo statements of unmistakable originality, technical acumen and expressive power.”
